Student-led activity: The K-W-L strategy

This method can be used to:

- assess students' knowledge about a particular topic/issue and what gaps may exist in that knowledge,
- to structure progress in their learning
- to analyse what new information has been learned after research; Flipped classroom

Dublin

K	W	L
What I/we know about Dublin (students write what they think they already know about a particular topic or issue)	What I/we want to know about Dublin (students are then encouraged to think about the gaps in their knowledge by filling out what they want to know) HOMEWORK	What I/we learned about Dublin (students return to their grids to fill in the final 'L' column. Here they confirm the accuracy of their first two columns and compare what they have learned with their initial thoughts on the topic in the 'K' column)
The capital of Ireland Many pubs The population of Dublin 1.7 million	More about Irish culture Where to eat What to visit	The best pizza place Forno 500 Dame street
